

TELEVISION SERIES / PROJECT DEVELOPMENT

Serial Eyes

Serial Eyes prepares the next generation of European TV writer-producers to bring first-class storytelling to television screens. The writers' room experience is at the core of the programme: the twelve Serial Eyes participants learn to work as a group and develop a European model of showrunning.

Dates: September to May (full time)

Application deadline: normally in February each year

Participants gain experience in working as a team and assuming the role of head writer in the creative process. At the same time, participants gain a solid understanding of the dramaturgic and narrative strategies used in successful fiction series.

During the programme, Serial Eyes participants conceive and develop a slate of projects for broadcast television and digital platforms that expand creative boundaries and boost the quality of TV writing.

Serial Eyes' faculty and mentors include established showrunners and head writers, script editors, creative producers and commissioning editors from major European broadcasters.

Serial Eyes classes are taught at the Deutsche Film- und Fernsehakademie Berlin (DFFB) in Berlin. Two workshops are organised at the London Film School and in Stockholm with visits to local production companies and broadcasters to meet TV professionals.

Serial Eyes participants tap into multiple opportunities to meet European TV professionals at the Berlinale, Séries Mania in Lille and Serial Eyes' Final Pitch in Berlin.

Big Light Productions offers a paid three-month TV apprenticeship at the firm's London office for one Serial Eyes participant after he/she has completed the programme.
